Mapping Your Jagged Frontier.

WHY THIS, AND WHY NOW

Every leader is using AI.
Few would call themselves fluent with it.

Fluency is the word that keeps surfacing — in board rooms, in one-on-ones, in the quiet anxiety of experienced leaders watching a capability race past them faster than any they have lived through before. The gap between using AI and leading with it is the gap this practicum is designed to start closing.

This is not a briefing. It is not a tools overview. It is a structured practice — two live sessions and three weeks of applied work — in which you will map the frontier of AI for a real piece of your own work, redesign one workflow you own, and leave with a ninety-day plan and a peer you have agreed to stay in touch with.

THE SHAPE OF THE PRACTICUM

SESSION ONE · 20 MAY · 8—11 AM

Mapping the frontier.

Three hours, virtual. You will run a structured experiment on a task you bring with you — first without AI, then as a centaur, then as a cyborg — and produce a personal map of what AI does well, what it does poorly, and where your own line sits.

Focus: Strategic fluency

SESSION TWO · 11 JUNE · 8—11 AM

Designing with agents.

Three hours, virtual. You will bring a workflow you have redesigned in the intervening weeks, workshop it with peers against four lenses of AI fluency, and leave with three written commitments for the following ninety days.

Focus: Operational fluency

> Knowing what to delegate teaches you something about the model. Knowing what not to delegate teaches you something about yourself.

FROM A COHORT SESSION · 2026

WHO IT IS FOR

Leaders already in the work.

AVT alumni who are using AI regularly and want to move from intuition to practice. A working cohort that will sharpen your thinking by working alongside peers in similar roles.

WHAT YOU TAKE AWAY

A map, a redesign, a plan.

A personal map of the jagged frontier for your work. A redesigned workflow you have tested. Three written commitments for the next ninety days. An alumni buddy you have agreed to check in with at T+90.
